Description:

This 3-hour workshop will provide medical interpreters an opportunity to understand why and how the human brain engages in stereotyping and develops bias, recognize the difference between explicit and implicit bias, and explore how implicit bias impacts health outcomes and the role of implicit bias in their own work in the medical setting. Participants will be introduced to historical treatment of Persons of Color in the U.S. healthcare system; and how bias and racist practices continue to promote health inequities in these populations. Finally, we will explore the impact of racism and bias on the practice of interpreters, both in its impact on patients and on interpreters themselves. Participants will consider the different roles they might play in addressing racist or biased interactions in a healthcare encounter through case-based discussions.

Learning Objectives:

At the conclusion of this session, participants will:

1. Describe the role of stereotyping and bias in human evolution;
2. Compare and contrast explicit and implicit bias;
3. Identify strategies to uncover and reduce one's own implicit biases;
4. Discuss the history of racism in American medicine;
5. Recognize the impact of racism and bias on patient outcomes and population health;
6. Identify techniques for addressing micro- and macroaggressions in the workplace;
7. Analyze common clinical scenarios where racism and bias may be encountered;
8. Examine the role of the interpreter in providing communication access and as a cultural broker, advocate, and ally when racism and bias is encountered when interpreting.

About the Trainer:

Lisa Walker, PA-C, is the founding director of the Physician Assistant program at the MGH Institute of Health Professions in Boston. She has over 20 years' experience in PA education. Prior to becoming a PA, Lisa received her AS degree in Interpreting for the Deaf from Northern Essex Community College and worked as a medical interpreter. She is the author of a chapter on patients with disabilities in the widely used text Physician Assistant: A Guide to Clinical Practice, now in its fifth edition. She has presented regionally and nationally on health disparities, health literacy, and improving access to care.
